

ABSTRACT

A device for the combined presentation of first and second items the device including a first element detachably securable to the first item and the second item. The first element adapted for flexibly squeezing the first and second items. A second element detachably securable to the first item and the second item. The second element adapted for flexibly squeezing the first and said second items.

A connecting element attached to the first element and the second element.